

Admittance to the doctoral studies is gained through an oral examination, taking place in September. Citizens of states members of the European Union, as well as the European Economic Area and the Swiss Confederation may candidate under the same legal conditions as Romanian citizens, including in respect to the school fees. Citizens of other states can enroll for the doctoral exam in conformity with what is specified in current regulations. Foreign citizens of Romanian ethnicity may be admitted following the admittance examination organised in conformity with particular rules and methodology approved by the M.E.N.

General conditions for candidates:

The examination for admittance is open to those who have acquired a Master's degree (or the equivalent to it) in a field pertaining to that of Philology, or related to it (the humanities: philosophy, history, psychology, journalism, communications, cultural studies). Graduates from generations anterior to the Bologna system must provide documents proving their completion of five years of university studies, or the equivalent, in order to obtain their inscription to the doctorate. In these particular cases, the necessary will be done to avoid, where it might occur, a double fee. The diplomas of the anterior university cycles must have been issued by the Ministry of Education of Romania or the equivalent institution in the country where the candidate studied. In this last case, the candidate must provide proof that his diplomas are recognized by or converted into the MECTS system. The inscription to the oral examination is conditioned by the candidates having obtained an arithmetic average of at least 8.00 / 10 between the result of the Bachelor's Degree Examination and the result of the Master's Degree Examination.

The admittance is made based on an oral examination which takes place in September 2019. If there are candidates with identical majors, the dissertation examination serves as a tie-breaker.
